

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

UNIVERSITY OF FASHION OFFERS ONE-ON-ONE FASHION EDUCATION

First-Ever Online Fashion Design Video Library

NEW YORK, January 22, 2014- Did Paris Spring/Summer 2014 Haute Couture Week leave you with the desire to learn how to design beautiful dresses or how to sew using couture techniques? Were the couture collections of Chanel, Raf Simmons, Schiaparelli, Dior and Tony Ward so inspirational that they inspired you to find out what it takes to be a fashion designer? The University of Fashion (U of F), an Online Fashion Design Video Library is the place to teach people just like you! From draping beautiful silhouettes to creating a fantastic fashion portfolio, U of F delivers fashion education via high-definition video tutorials, on-demand, at your convenience or in your school's library!

Combining innovation with an extensive fashion background, Francesca Sterlacci has created the next thing in at-home fashion design education.

"University of Fashion is a dream come true for me. With my many years as Chair of F.I.T's Fashion Design Program, (and designing my own collections) I understand what is needed to be a fashion designer. I wanted to offer a one-on-one experience while preserving the art and craft of fashion and most importantly, I wanted to inspire!" said creator, Francesca Sterlacci.

University of Fashion features lessons taught by college fashion professors and industry pros. So, whether you are someone who is fashion curious, or an industry pro who wants to freshen up your skills, U of F is the ideal tool. Check it out here for yourself!

For interview opportunities, or for a media login to the library, please contact us at press@universityoffashion.com.
